PFC Glenn W. Salisbury: A homecoming story

Jeannette Duvall-Ward
Idaho Military Museum Board Secretary

Three hundred and sixty-four Idaho soldiers are still missing in action from three of our major wars – WWII, the Korean War and the Vietnam War.

Over the years, nine missing Idahoans have been found. One such soldier was Private First Class Glenn W. Salisbury, assigned to the 36th Texas Division.

On January 20, 1945, he was reported Missing in Action. The family always hoped that some day they would hear some news.

Years passed and Glenn was declared officially dead and awarded a Purple Heart. His body was never found.

The day finally came in 1977, more than 30 years later.

Army Major Herbert Bossler notified Glenn’s mother. “A French farmer, working in his fields near the French-German border, where a lot of action took place during the last months of the war, had uncovered a grave.

He notified the authorities, both civilian and military, and subsequent investigation proved the remains in the lonely grave to be those of an American soldier identified by dog tags, a belt buckle, a pocket-knife, a wallet, and dental work as PFC Glenn Salisbury, evidently killed in action on January 20, 1945 – a short time after his last letter home had been mailed from a military outpost in the area.”

Salisbury’s identity was confirmed by the Defense POW/MIA Accounting Agency. The DPAA’s mission is to “Provide the fullest possible accounting for our missing personnel to their families and the nation.” They never stop looking for our missing soldiers.

The DPAA Laboratory is the largest and most diverse skeletal identification laboratory in the world staffed by more than 30 anthropologists, archaeologists and forensic odontologists. (For more information about what they do, go to http://www.dpaa.mil/.)

On September 10, 1977, Glenn came home to Gooding, Idaho from Berlin, Germany, escorted by military personnel. His final resting place is Elmwood Cemetery in Gooding.

“Glenn Salisbury saw his family for the last time in the early Fall of 1944, on furlough. A cowboy from his earliest years, he enjoyed ranch life, and hoped to come home to a spread of his own, after the war.”

And to you, PFC Glenn Salisbury, Idaho is glad you’ve been home since 1977. Rest assured we will never stop looking for your fellow soldiers who never have made it back.

Author’s note: Information about PFC Salisbury’s homecoming is from documents received by the Idaho Military Museum which included a newspaper article from “The Enterprise of Southern Idaho” dated September 8, 1977.
2018 may be a record year for Idaho’s Military Museum

2018 is shaping up to be a record year for the museum. Visitation has been steady since the first of the year. School group visits and special activities have shown an increase from last year.

We have completed placing the signage on the outdoor exhibits which will give our guests additional information about the artifacts.

The staff has once again taken part in the BSU history class facilitated by Dr. David Walker, history professor at Boise State University. The class will culminate with several of the students taking part in a one day workshop in which they will “live fire” an assortment of armament from the Revolutionary War through WW2.

With Spring and Summer rapidly approaching, we are planning some fun events and activities. Stay tuned for additional information.

— Jeff Packer, Executive Director

Remember that admission is always free (donations are welcomed). The museum is open to the public Tuesday through Saturday (except Christmas and New Year’s day) from noon to 4 p.m. Allow at least one hour for your visit. Our volunteer staff will be happy to help you with any questions that you might have about the displays and our museum.

The Idaho Military Museum is located on Gowen Field, but can be accessed by the private entrance on Harvard Street. On Orchard Street or Gowen Road, follow brown “museum” signs to find the museum. Free parking for cars or buses is in the front of the museum.

It’s healthy to volunteer!

A study conducted at the University of Michigan Research Center and published in the March 1998 Issue of American Health found that volunteering, more than any other activity, dramatically increases life expectancy.

According to the center:
*Men who volunteered at least once a week over the course of the study lived two-and-one-half times longer than men who did not volunteer.

*Participants with heart problems who volunteered had reduced cholesterol levels and chest pains.

*The study also concluded that “volunteering is a way of connecting with people, and those with many social contacts tend to live longer than those who are more isolated regardless of race, income, and level of activity.” – VolunteerMatch.org

Please join us for board meetings

The museum’s Board of Directors extends an ongoing, open invitation to anyone interested to attend and participate in monthly museum board meetings. The meetings are usually held the last Thursday of the month at the museum starting at 18:30 and last for about 60 minutes.

We want and value the involvement and help of our fellow museum supporters. We welcome both questions and suggestions. We don’t claim to have all the answers, so we can always use the input, ideas and enthusiasm of our board members and supporters.

Anyone interested in serving as a member of our board is encouraged to attend and learn how they might help to make the museum better and better.

If you are interested in attending, call Jeff Packer at 208-272-4841.

In 1908, the Army reevaluated the M1904 haversack and changed the design to create a new haversack, designated as the M1908. It was slightly smaller than the M1904 and two wire hooks on the back of the “1904” were replaced by two spring hooks. This example was carried by a soldier in H Company, 2nd Idaho Volunteer Infantry, Idaho National Guard Supply Company. (Artifact donated by Harvey Dietz)

The following article is part of a series highlighting an historical artifact in the Idaho Military Museum.

The GAU-8/A Avenger can be found at the tip of one of Gowen Field’s many A-10 Thunderbolt II airplanes, but those wishing to get a closer look at the entire weapon system can do so at the Idaho Military Museum.

The gun has been in service since 1977 and is the only weapon system to have a plane built around it, the A-10 Thunderbolt II. Most weapon systems found in aircrafts were either designed around the aircraft or added after the design was completed.

The gun has been in service since 1977 and is the only weapon system to have a plane built around it, the A-10 Thunderbolt II. Most weapon systems found in aircrafts were either designed around the aircraft or added after the design was completed.

The 30 mm Gatling gun is capable of firing up to 3,900 rounds a minute and is so powerful that it can only be fired in one- or two-second bursts to avoid overheating. It is 19-feet, five-inches long and weighs more than 600 pounds.

The gun shoots armor-piercing rounds that are 11.4 inches long, weigh about 14 ounces and travel 3,250 feet per second. Each of the gun’s seven barrels contains its own breech bolt assembly, which fires once per gun revolution and ensures a longer barrel life for the gun.

Quick facts:
Gun type: Seven-barrel, 30 mm, externally powered Gatling gun
Weight: 620 pounds
Rate of fire: up to 3,900 shots per minute

Idaho’s Military History museum has grown to more than six times its original size when it first opened in Bldg. 303 on Gowen Field. The museum’s first home was a wooden structure built in 1942 to serve as the fledgling base’s “Athletic and Recreation” office.
